

The NextGen Precision Health Pathways 2026 symposium will gather UM System biomedical researchers, talented trainees, and invited speakers for a day of discussion that navigates the diverse pathways of precision health. The event will inspire collaboration, foster networking, and provide insights to propel participants in their translational research careers.

The 2026 symposium will feature talks and posters on translational research topics, including cancer, immunology, reproductive health, data science, and more. Sponsor contributions will support student and speaker attendance, as well as cover associated technology and logistical conference costs.
